

TO NEGOTIATE A SETTLEMENT

Prominent Strike Leaders Desert The Shea
Faction And Want Peace At Once.

GRAND JURY FINDS MANY FACTS

Plot Was To Ruin Montgomery Ward & Company--Many Large Sums Were To Be Paid For That Purpose.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Chicago, Ill., June 17.—The demand for a settlement of the strike is being framed by the anti-Shea delegates in the teamsters' joint council, according to reports today. It is said the powerful leaders of the teamsters' union have broken away from the Shea clique and will attempt to secure enough pledges today and Sunday to force a joint council at the meeting on Monday to call off the strike. It is reported representatives of several unions will protest at the meeting of the Federation of Labor tomorrow against the continuance of assessments for the benefit of the teamsters.

Thousands Used
The admission is made by State's Attorney Healy that the grand jury had found important evidence confirming the report the present strike is the result of a conspiracy directed against the firm of Montgomery Ward & Co. by other employers and strike-leaders, involving the payment of thirty thousand dollars in installments of ten and twenty thousand.

Not only may the men involved be charged with a conspiracy to call strikes and injure the business of competitors, but they may be charged with the cases of manslaughter and assault which have grown out of the present strike. Twelve deaths are directly traceable to the present strike, and they are being considered in connection with the other evidence.

Startling Charges
State's Attorney Healy, while taking every precaution to keep secret the doings in the grand jury room, admitted that he was well pleased with the information thus far received, and declared he expected important results before the inquiry closes.

Assistant State's Attorney Fiske said that not once in a thousand years is such testimony presented to a grand jury, and that some startling exposures will result.

The grand jury, it is said, is practically convinced that there was a conspiracy behind the present strike, and it is on this point that evidence is being collected. The labor leaders are said to be worrying more over the new developments than they did over the graft charges, as the latter are, in most instances, outlawed by the statute of limitations.

Prominent employers connected with the present strike were called before the grand jury.

fore the inquisitors and questioned concerning a conspiracy.

Steps to End Strike.
Definite steps to have the teamsters' strike brought to a speedy end were taken by the Teamsters' joint council, and President Shea was forced to acquiesce.

A special meeting of the council will be held Monday night, and a committee, selected which will be vested with full authority to end the strike. The peace movement was started by L. B. Beebe, secretary of the Van Teamsters' union and a leader in the anti-Shea faction.

The proposition to call a special meeting was unanimously agreed to, and the sentiment was that the strike would have to end before the close of next week. The committee will be instructed to bring the dispute to a close, even if the employers' terms have to be accepted in full.

Shea Losing Power.
For several days the opposition to President Shea has been crystallizing, and it is said he is no longer able to control the council. The fact that the peace movement was started by one of his most bitter opponents is taken as an indication that he will be unable to balk the settlement plans as he has done in the past.

Beebe reviewed the progress of the strike in the council meeting and said that in the interests of the organization it had to stop. He declared that the organized teamsters of the city could gain nothing by prolonging the struggle, while they had much to lose.

Time to Settle.
He said that every day the strike lasted the number of teamsters who would be reinstated to their former positions would grow smaller and that the time to settle was now.

More Testimony.
The grand jury investigating the alleged labor graft heard two witnesses this morning. George Wahl of a State street restaurant told the jury of certain labor leaders who made serious threats to injure him if he continued to buy of boycotted houses. At the close of the session Assistant State's Attorney Fiske intimated a number of indictments would be returned. When the jury meets Monday the labor leaders will be invited to tell all they know of the alleged attempts to bribe them.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Boston, Mass., June 17.—The battle of Bunker Hill was celebrated here today with the anniversary of the final adieu to Boston of the British fleet in 1776. Although the fleet, or a large portion of it, removed on June 14, 1776, far enough away in Boston harbor as not to be struck by the small calibre cannon and a short range mortar of the Continentals at Long Island, it is probable that the British fleet was in the waters of Boston Bay on or about the 17th, hence the joint celebration.

PROTOCOL IS TO BE SIGNED

Oyama And Linevitch Will Meet Between Their Two Armies For That Purpose.

WILL OUTLINE TERMS OF PEACE

Representatives of Russia And Japan Have Practically Agreed Upon The Terms That Will Be Presented.

Washington, June 17.—Russia and Japan have had a sufficient interchange of views through Washington to give assurance that as a preliminary to peace an armistice will be effected at an early day. Alone on the plains of Manchuria, midway between the two great armies, Field Marshal Oyama and General Linevitch will meet to sign the truce which will pave the way for the Washington conference if the present tentative program is followed.

Fears Effect of Battle.

President Roosevelt has been casting his influence to this end. He has feared that without an armistice, a battle in Manchuria might wreck completely the peace negotiations. It will be a limited armistice, in that no effort will be made to check the movement of reinforcements or supply. Each army will be restricted simply from making any forward movement or any movement by which it might better its position for a blow at the foe should the peace negotiation fall through.

It is not at all improbable that a peace protocol may be signed in Washington or elsewhere within a very short time and that the armistice to be concluded in the field will be stipulated by this protocol, which could with propriety contain further stipulations as to the plenipotentiaries whom the Russian and Japanese governments will have appointed by that time. Such has been the course on many occasions when warring nations have concluded peace.

May Meet in August.

It is now thought possible that the plenipotentiaries may reach Washington by the first week in August. While no official confirmation is forthcoming, it is considered altogether probable that Russia's original nomination of M. Nelidoff, Russian ambassador at Paris, will stand. Marquis Ito can be one of the Japanese representatives.

If he is desired, "He" is often called the "grand old man of Japan," is prominently identified with the Japanese foreign policy and as a counsel of the "open door" school is considered eminently fitted for a peace conference in which the United States will insist that both Russia and Japan adhere to their frequently expressed indorsement of the "open door." Baron Rosen, who will succeed Count Cassini as Russian ambassador here, will possibly be one of Russia's nominations on account of his presence at Washington, and because of his service as Russian minister at Tokio before the war. Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister here, might be selected for the same reason.

Differ as to Language.

An important point to be decided will be the language to be used in the negotiations. Russia will prefer French, which is the language of Russian diplomacy. Japan does not want French used, and as a foil to a suggestion of French by the Muscovite diplomats might express a preference for Japanese, with the result that a compromise might be effected on English. There have been instances of the use of both French and English in diplomatic proceedings.

The size of the indemnity which Japan will ask still remains the vital question. The best information here is that the war has cost Japan at least $1,000,000,000, but it is pointed out that this is not all profitless expenditure, for Japan has gained an outlet for the surplus population in Korea and Manchuria, has wiped out the greatest menace of Port Arthur, has rolled back the tide of the Russian advance into China, has maimed her natural foe as a sea power and has, by capture, materially strengthened her own navy as well as increasing her own prestige. In view of all that Japan has gained it is believed that the neutrals will be enabled to persuade her that the indemnity should be small.

She finished first, but was beaten on account of the time she had to allow to other boats. Fifteen boats are entered in the race.

FAST TRAINS START ON SUNDAY MORNING

New York Central Will Follow the Example of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
New York, June 17.—The New York Central, following the example, or meeting the competition of the Pennsylvania Railroad, will tomorrow morning put into operation a train between New York and Chicago, which will make the run in eighteen hours, thus clipping two hours from the record of the Twentieth Century limited. These trains, we are told, will be the fastest in the world for so great a distance. Heretofore the lighter French and British trains, running for shorter distances between terminals, have been able to make faster time than ours. The Southern Express out of Paris runs 484 miles in nine hours. The express from London to Edinburgh, 393 miles, in seven and three-quarters hours and the express to Glasgow, 401 miles, in eight hours. But the New York Central train runs 980 miles in eighteen hours. If this can be kept up, the United States will have a new record for fast running. But fast trains are always an experiment. These may have to come off, like the twenty-hour train of a number of years ago.

MANY WILL GO TO MILWAUKEE

BIENNIAL MEETING OF HEAD WOODMEN CAMP NEXT WEEK.

SPECIAL TRAINS SCHEDULED

Carnival and Street Parade Will Be Drawing Feature for the Great Majority.

With excursion rates in force on both roads all next week and special trains being run from here and various points along each line on different days many will go from Janesville to Milwaukee, attracted by the biennial meeting of the head camp of the Modern Woodmen of America. It was first planned that the drill team of the Janesville lodge should go into camp there with hundreds of other Foresters and take part in the competitive drills for the prizes, but it is now thought that the members of the team will go in as individuals only and may as an organization take part in the Grand Foresters' parade, Thursday afternoon. They will probably not contend for the cash awards. It is almost impossible to estimate the numbers that will go from here for many who are not members of the order will take advantage of the low rates on the roads and make a visit in the Cream City.

Parade and Carnival. The head officers of the Woodmen have stated that 50,000 to 75,000 "trekkers" will gather there. These figures are based on advance reports from the various parts of the country and are doubtless not overdrawn. The program for the first part of the week will prove of no great special interest to those who form the great mass of the membership of the society but the parade on Thursday and the street carnival on Friday afternoon will draw many.

Program for Week

The following program has been arranged for the meeting:
Saturday, June 17—Meeting of Local Camp Clerk's association, continuing until Monday evening, June 19.
Monday—Reception of delegates and Woodmen Foresters arriving in the city, assigning of quarters, etc.
Monday afternoon—Steamer ride on the lake under auspices of the local entertainment committee, for delegates and head officers.
Monday evening—Caucuses of the various state delegations.
Tuesday—Head camp will be in session.

Wednesday morning and afternoon—Sessions of the head camp. At 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, dress parade review of Foresters and officers in camp by the head officers of the society and delegates to head camp.

Wednesday evening—Exemplification of the secret work of the society by one of the crack Foresters team.

Thursday morning—Session of head camp.

Thursday afternoon—Grand Woodmen Foresters' parade.

Friday morning—Session of head camp.

Friday afternoon—Carnival.

Friday evening—The program provides for a session of the head camp, but it is not likely that any session will take place.

Saturday morning—Session of the head camp.

Saturday afternoon—Session of the head camp. Delegates, Foresters' staff officers and employees of the head camp will be paid Saturday afternoon. In the neighborhood of $200,000 will be disbursed by the head banker.

J. W. Van Buren, clerk of the Florence camp, left yesterday afternoon to attend the meeting of the clerks, being held there today and Monday.

AN UNUSUAL CASE OF SOMNAMBULISM

Seven-Year-Old Grace Dulin Left Home and Wandered for Hours Without Awakening

A rather unusual case of somnambulism or sleep-walking was brought to the notice of the police at an early hour yesterday morning. Sometime between ten and eleven o'clock Thursday night seven-year-old Grace Dulin, daughter of William Dulin who lives at 256 Pine street, left her bed, unlocked the doors without disturbing anyone in the household, and wandered out upon the streets. Perhaps an hour later she was missed by an elder sister with whom she shared the room and the whole family was aroused. Mr. Dulin hastened to the police station and the night patrolmen were soon scouring the city. Officer Fanning searched the railroad yards, but without result. The father also made a long tour of the neighborhood and had returned to his home in a distracted frame of mind about three o'clock when he caught sight of the missing child coming down the middle of the road. She was covered with dust and grime and had evidently been on a long tramp. When questioned she was unable to give any clear account of her wanderings and it was apparent that she had been sound asleep during the long interval she had been away from home.

Labor Notes

On the whole employment in Great Britain improved in March as compared with the preceding month. In the engineering and shipbuilding trades there was some decrease in the number unemployed. The cotton trade was very brisk.

The Tailors' Union of Sydney, New South Wales, has a membership of 955, and the Journeymen Tailors must number 1029. The result of their strong organizations is that they enjoy the highest wages and best conditions in Australia.

Out of a total of 178,906 members of 353 French trade unions (not including the unions of miners in the Nord and Pas-de-Calais departments) which made returns as to the state of employment during February, 1905, or 11 per cent more out of work on the 15th of the month, as compared with 13.8 per cent in the previous month, and 10.4 per cent in February, 1904.

The agreement between the Steamship Managers' Association and the Sailors' Union of the Pacific has been ratified by a large vote of the members in all the ports on the coast. Similar action by the members of the Marine Firemen and Marine Cooks and Stewards conclude the negotiations and insures harmonious relations between shipowners and seamen engaged in the steamship business for at least a year.

"EDDIE FAY" THE KOSHKONONG WOLF

That Gave Chase to Capt. Ord Baker's Iceboat Last Winter is a Captive in Nonesuch Zoo.

"Yon wolf," said Col. Nonesuch, pointing proudly to a savage beast that snarled incessantly and occasionally gave vent to blood-curling howls which drowned the lesser voices of the sacred moose and the lavender-plumed singing auk from New Zealand, "yon wolf is no phony wolf—are you 'Eddie Fay'?" It is my chief pride that some of the zoological marvels with which we expect to startle an expectant populace on July 4, possess no human attribute, either in voice, gesture, or general carriage. The howling bison, may bear a suspicious resemblance to those left by one of our city father's number nines, but there's no discount on the 18-carat wolf quality of the original "Damenramen," whom we have nicknamed "Eddie Fay" for short. When I saw him chasing Ord Baker and Frank Pierson on their iceboat last winter I said at once to my friend Louis Skavelt that he must be had at any cost. Magnificent specimen, is he not? Three days we pressed on through the jungles until at last we came to his lair in the thicket beside the Blue Mud creek. We baited the trap with a squirming carp and silently stole away. Next morn at dawn he was ours. Do you follow me? Sometimes I fall into this poetic meter quite unconsciously. Especially is this true when I soliloquize and speculate on the magnificent horizons that must bound such an admirable creature as "Eddie Fay." See him grating off toward the hill tops. He is thinking of liberty. Twice he has broken away from the keeper, Eddie Poenichen, but we are quite sure that he will not go so again. For we've faced his cage toward Beloit.

LOCAL AMATEURS FURNISH VARIOUS SPECIALTIES

CITIZEN THROWS A FEW BOUQUETS

PAYS ALDERMAN CONNELL TRIBUTE FOR SPITTING ORDINANCE

TALKS OF THE OLD SOLOIERS

Tells of Their New Uniform for Their Parades and Marches.

Janesville, Wis., June 17, 1905. Editor, Gazette: The ordinance vs. spitting or expectorating on the sidewalks, or in public places, in the city introduced in the council (and now a law) by that young but popular alderman, Connell, is among the many good things said and done by that rising young man. Our impression of him is that he is in no wise a policy man. How many men are there in this good city, business men, or aldermen, who are non-politic for the shoulder? We have thought for many years, and are more impressed year to year, that the consideration of policy in any act, or thought, is the base of human nature. Henry Clay when defeated for the presidency, said, "I would rather be right in all things, requires nerve and that man who is non-politic for the shoulder is a perfect man. Given him, and mankind will be drawn towards him as a needle to a magnet. The press is far from being eliminated of the sin, yielding to policy in political and many other ways. To do right is a safe policy—as we think, is always right—because we are then following the dictates of a God given conscience, and thus the personal responsibility is discharged.

We have been a reader of the Janesville Daily Gazette and the Chicago Tribune, both here and in distant lands, for more than fifty years. Their issues have been the most free from the contaminating influences of "policy" of any other publications coming under our observation. Of late years the Gazette and Tribune (the Chicago Chronicle may be added now) are expressions of, and by the people, and are daily in the ascendancy in the minds of the masses.

Referring again to the spitting ordinance: it has for many years been noted by the pedestrians passing on the various sidewalks in the city, of the congregated loafers on the corners, and particularly in front of the First National Bank building. Why this nuisance should have been permitted these many years is remarked by many. Andies have been required to pass around certain places, even into the street, to prevent the despoilment of their garments.

Loading is a disease, and much loading is liable to become chronic—it is an unprofitable field to work in. These gatherings, so much in vogue in the places mentioned, is a nuisance, and can be abated if the officers will do their duty. "The world do move"—so these promiscuous gatherings can be moved by law. We have often wondered why our "Athenian" "Old Pogy" did not devote from his kindly impartial criticism of a political nature, and make a side issue of matters fully as important, or more so, than politics. And now we have closed on that police club, and on the press, no harm done we hope.

We are relieved of this confounded thinking. Our nature is really of turn-finding of others, but when we turn our eyes inward, we see so many faults and erratic ways in ourselves that we are led to esteem all others better than ourselves, which is pleasant and unembarrassing in our daily walk.

With your indulgence we will again refer to the Grand Army boys, with many of whom we are well acquainted. The matter of a uniform has been in a more or less controversy since the organization of the Post, 23 years ago. Now, since age is creeping upon them, a more stalwart unity prevails among the faithful in the order. The touching of elbows, and hand-shaking is more prevalent. They bear the bugle call at the head of the grand column to halt and go into permanent camp. They see the hand in their every day walks beckoning "Come." Guns, accoutrements, and uniforms are to be thrown off to join in the broken phalanx of those gone to the great beyond.

Speaking of uniforms of the Grand Army boys in this city, we are reminded, of what has been said to us, that twenty years ago the matter came to an interested discussion as to the kind of a uniform. Then the good Commander was much opposed to what the Post then resolved to do but with his good humor, he yielded to the persuasion of his comrades and a dress was prescribed by a large majority. It consisted of the standard indigo blue blouse, vest and pants, brass buttons, G. A. R. wreath and cord for hat, the G. A. R. badge, and the popular G. A. R. button, with white gloves for street parade.

The Commander reluctantly fell into line. Now an occasion was presented to parade, and proceed to the North-Western depot to receive and escort the Bower City band from depot to their quarters. This courtesy to the band was in reciprocation for a reception and escort by said band given to the Post on a similar occasion. Now, the coats were made in the style then in vogue "delicate, delineator, decoate-use, demarc-use," by the fashionable artist, Mr. Seymour. Well, the good Commander wore the suit to please the boys, but upon getting home he put the suit away where he hoped the moths and rust would destroy it, but he resolved to don that suit again unless they were the only garments left on earth to cover his person. We are informed that at a recent meeting of the Post a same matter of uniform for the members was adopted and which will probably prevail for all times, as far as this Post is concerned. The new order consists of white gloves, on all street parades as a distinguishing mark of members in good standing of the G. A. R. The button, made from captured rebel cannon, is always worn. On parades, the soldiers of the Civil War, and of the Spanish War, with invited guests, will be welcomed and assigned to the right of the column and all confusion will be eliminated. The department encampment of the G. A. R. at La Crosse, which closed last Wednesday, was the most complete in all its appointments, of any ever held since the organization of the order. The city, the most beautiful, the people the most hospitable, the decorations the most elaborate, the attendance the greatest, (considering the number depleted by death) the choice of officers for the ensuing year, with the greatest unanimity and finally the ideal weather. All in all, made the occasion the most happy one. The good people of La Crosse were in the happiest mood; men, women and children vied, with each other with radiant expressions of welcome to the Grand Army boys, infusing them with renewed vigor, and a new lease in life.

CRACKERS DOOMED BY THE NEW LAWS

Small Boy Must Content Himself with the Smaller Variety This Fourth.

Fourth of July enthusiasts will not be allowed to discharge giant firecrackers. A state law prohibits the shooting off of these explosives and the police will enforce it rigidly. The small boy also must refrain from shooting off all other kinds of fireworks until the glorious fourth. Insurance companies grant dealers whom they insure permits to carry small quantities of fireworks. Unless the permits are inserted in the policy, however, the latter is null and void. If a business man makes it a practice to carry a large line of explosives he will be charged extra for the permit. An insurance agent when asked whether the policy would be good in case a man did not obtain a permit to carry them contrary to his policy replied that if the dealer's stock should take fire, and fire was due to the fireworks, the dealer would not get a cent out of the insurance company. The cost of this extra risk will be heavy, but as the dealers will only have to carry these permits for about two months in the year at the most it would not be as large as at first thought, would appear.

Very sincerely yours,
"CITIZEN."

WELCOMED THE CLASS OF 1905

ANNUAL BANQUET OF JANESVILLE HIGH SCHOOL ALUMNI.

A VERY ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

One Hundred and Twenty Five Present—A Pleading After Dinner Program.

Thirty-nine new members, added by the award of diplomas at the commencement exercises Thursday evening, were right royally welcomed into the Alumni association of the Janesville high school last evening. It was the occasion of the annual banquet of the society and one hundred and twenty-five members of different classes that have graduated as far back as 1853 were present to recall again the scenes of their early education, renew friendships with old classmates, schoolmates and cordially receive the members of the new class. Mrs. O. Parker was one of the guests of honor, she representing the class of '58.

Supper Served

At six-thirty o'clock those who had gathered took their places according to classes and at seven sat down at the tables which were spread in the gymnasium. The members of the faculty and board of education with President of the Alumni Mrs. Abbie Helms at the head, were seated at one table, the class of 1905, in whose honor the affair was held, at another, and the other classes about surrounding tables in the order of years. The decorations for graduation were still in place and with the aid of flowers the auditorium was turned into a dining hall of beauty. The repast was served by the ladies of the Baptist church and following was the menu:

Cream of Potatoes
Warm Rolls
Ham
Beef Loaf
Fruit Salad
Coffee
Ice Cream
Cakes

When the inner man was satisfied and the supper completed the president rapped for order and attention was given to the post-prandial program. Mrs. Helms of the class of '79 gave the address of welcome in a manner most hearty and inaugurated the after-dinner numbers. Leonard Matthews of '98 sang two selections and was liberally applauded. His pieces were "Ostranation" by Fontanelles and "Good Night" by Oliver. Mrs. Janet B. Day, as a member of the School board, toasted on the subject "The Fairy Godmother" and her thoughts were cleverly introduced and brought out by humor. Mrs. John P. Wright of '73, whose two daughters are also members of the alumni, spoke on "The Pond Parent," and referred to the class of 1905 as the new child in the family of the association. Charles Raymond of Pulaski, a graduate in '97, rendered excellently a vocal solo, Piusini's "Is." Miss Amy Woodruff of '99 furnished a reading in a finished and delightful manner. Her selection was "Miss Perch's Supper." Mrs. Fannie Munger, as one of the later graduates but still not among the newest classes, toasted the topic, "The Big Sister." John O'Grady, a member of last year's class, talked on the subject, "Crowded Out." He referred to the fall of his class from the place of honor which it held a year, now being taken by a new class. Miss Louise Merrill of '02 delighted those present with a well-rendered piano solo and was free-encored. Her selection was entitled "The Airball" by Chaminade. Miss Ruth Field, in behalf of the new class, with cleverness toasted "Our Youngest," thanking the association for the welcome which they had received and acknowledging the honor that had been shown them. The class song was then sung by the members of '05 and after the class yell an informal session was held.

Janesville Daily Gazette, Saturday, June 17, 1865.—Acknowledgments.—Mr. L. W. Eastman, the instructor of the thirteenth regiment band, desires us, in behalf of the members of the band, to return their thanks to the citizens of Janesville who so generously entertained them during their stay in this city. Mr. Eastman, who has started for his home in Pendleton, Ind., thinks this the nearest to being a white country of any thing he has seen lately.

Musical Convention.—The indications now are that the Musical Convention which is to meet on the 25th of this month, will be one of the largest that ever assembled in this city. There will probably be over a hundred singers, here from abroad, who will need to be entertained by our citizens; and we trust there will be a generous spirit shown in this matter. During the convention at Allens Grove over a hundred were entertained, and we are sure our city will do no less than so small a place. Let those who are willing to entertain one or more, hand in their names to some member of the committee, Messrs. John R. Bennett, J. W. Win-gate, J. R. Porter, Jas. Loudon, W. G. Eldridge.

A cordial invitation is extended to all singers in this city and vicinity who can read music, to take part in the convention whether they have received a circular of invitation or not.

Ten thousand freed men in South Carolina are now industriously at work cultivating the soil, and 2,000 children are attending school regularly.

Gen. Scott completed his 74th year of age on Tuesday last and was complimented by his friends at West Point on the occasion.

LONG SLEEP AND VERY SHORT LIFE

THE SEVENTEEN YEAR LOCUST LIVES A SHORT TIME.

WORM, HOWEVER, IS BURIED

Sleeps Seventeen Years and Then Comes to Life—Brief Bit of History.

It is now a matter beyond dispute that the seventeen year locust which last visited southern Wisconsin in 1888 is again in evidence. Round about Janesville, thousands of these insects can be heard singing or buzzing in the trees and even within the city limits some large and lively specimens have been found. Dr. Clinton Helm of Rockford has made a study of these interesting insects. With his daughter and family he is spending the summer on the Rock river in a neat cottage just below Beloit. Other prominent scientists have also become interested in this phenomenon and much is being said and written regarding them. Dr. Holmes makes an interesting statement regarding these Cicada, their proper name, which may be good reading for Janesville people.

The Pests. He says this is the fifth visitation of the seventeen year locust that he remembers. The first in 1837; the second in 1854; then in 1871; then in 1888, and now in 1905. They seem, as far as he can see, as numerous now as ever. This colony of locusts extends as far west as central Iowa; as far south as central Illinois, somewhat up into Wisconsin, but the doctor does not know whether it extends much east of us or not.

Another Kind. There is another colony in Kentucky coming every seventeen years, but not on the years they come here. These locusts are not locusts at all, nor are they grasshoppers. They are very slightly if at all migratory and they come up out of the ground looking much like huge bumble bees without wings. They leave nearly straight holes in the ground which look as if they had been bored in by an auger.

Their Growth. Very soon after appearing above ground they crawl up on little bushes and soon they begin to spit along the back and the white Cicada emerges with small folded wings. These wings grow dark, full veined and large within two hours when the Cicada is about its full size. The empty shell often remains attached for some time to the leaves of the bushes.

Live Six Weeks. The male Cicada are the singers, the females make no noise; hence the Greeks spoke of the Cicada being very happy because they had voiceless wives. On their wings is plainly marked the letter "W," which superstitious people formerly believed to mean war. As the season advances their shrill voices grow somewhat deeper and the sound they make is something like "Pharaoh."

Live Six Weeks. They live about six weeks, preferring oak forests, and the female deposits her eggs in the twigs. These twigs soon die and drop to the ground. The grubs hatched from them disappear in the ground where they remain as grubs for the long period of seventeen years, when they again emerge and this process is repeated.

CONFIDENT OF VICTORY FOR THEIR OWN PLAYERS

Much interest is being shown in the contest between the Janesville and Rockford Eagles which is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon at Love's park near Beloit. The excursion will be enjoyed not only by the Eagles and their families but by many others who will avail themselves of the opportunity for a day's outing. The local Eagles are making great plans how they will celebrate the victory which they expect to win.

SECTION HAND KILLED AT KAUKAUNA IS THOUGHT TO HAVE RELATIVES IN CITY

Eugene Hughes Hurler to Death by Being Struck With Locomotive While on Hand-Car.

Eugene Hughes, a section hand who is thought to have relatives in this city and to have at one time worked here, though nobody who remembered the man could be found today, was killed at Kaukauna last evening. He, together with ten workmen and the foreman, John McMorrow, were returning home after the day's work on a hand-car when they were struck by a switch-engine and caboose going at full speed. The collision occurred on the bridge that spans Konkapot creek a mile from Kaukauna and the men were unable to hear or see the approach of the engine on account of the curves. All escaped by jumping except Hughes, who lived about fifteen minutes. His neck was broken and shoulder and breast crushed. He was hurried into the creek but was rescued and lived for about a quarter of an hour. Dispatches concerning the accident state: "Little is known about Hughes further than that he has a wife and five children. He came to Kaukauna a week ago from Neenah. Workmen who conversed with him believe that he has relatives at Janesville. He is about 45 years old. The body was brought to this city."

CURRENT NEWS NOTES.

Wants $500 More: Nearly every severe rain-storm in Janesville is followed by the service on the city by the attorneys for Mrs. Kate Richter who owns the hotel property on the five points that the said city is held liable for $500 damages for the flooding of cellar and consequent weakening of the building owing to the insufficiency, want of repair and care of the sewers. The latest one is for the storm of June 4, 1905, and was served today.

To Go to London: Deacon A. F. Haol has been elected a delegate to the Baptist World's Congress which meets in London, England, in July, and will shortly leave for Europe, sailing the last of the month.

Special Meeting: On Monday evening there will be a special meeting of the general arrangements committee and the chairman of each of the four of July committees at the Gas Office at half-past seven. Matters of importance will come up and a full attendance is desired.

Work on the Streets: The contractors at work on South Main street have rushed work along and in three days have completed one-half of a block. Despite the heat many persons stop to watch the work of laying the bricks. Several of the wheelbarrow men have been forced to quit owing to the extreme heat and this has delayed work somewhat.

Robins Fight for Young: Recently a robin was seen attacking a large dog and pecking savagely at his head and eyes. Investigation showed that the dog was in the neighborhood of a young bird that was unable to fly very well. Later when a man picked the bird up to place it in a tree out of harm's way the same actions by the old mother robin were repeated.

When Crinoline Was New. In the World of Fashion of 1830 is a reference to "the new stuff called crinoline." Crinoline was partly thread, partly horsehair, its name being compounded of the French "crin," horsehair, and "line," flax. ## SUMMER FRUITS FLOOD MARKET

LARGE SUPPLY OF HOME GROWN STRAWBERRIES FOR SALE.

Parsley, bunch—5c. Butter and Eggs. Dairy butter, pound—17c. Creamery butter, pound—23c. Fresh eggs, dozen—16c. Honey, pound—14c. California and Florida have risen to the occasion, and with the advent of hot weather, have flooded the markets of the northwest with an abundance of luscious summer fruit. Coupled with this inflow from the tropics the home gardens too are furnishing an increasing supply of fruits and vegetables as the season advances. The display of fruits in front of Janesville stores today proved attractive to passers-by and many purchases were made. Watermelons, muskmelons, peaches, apricots, pears, plums, cherries and strawberries are associated with the advanced summer.

Luscious Strawberries. Strawberries from the home growers have been on the market for the last few days and are of finer flavor than any of the earlier arrivals, the price being decidedly lower. For a time it was thought that the fruit from this locality would be of an inferior grade, but the favorable weather of the ripening season came on and the result has produced berries of unusual size on the market. Merchants are receiving all the strawberries they can handle and some farmers who are turned away dispose of their product by peddling it from house to house. It is stated that strawberries will not be put in as large quantities this season as last year. The cause assigned is that much of the canned berries is not yet consumed on account of the immense crop of last year.

Fruits to be Cheaper. It is predicted by merchants that in two weeks lovers of fresh fruits may indulge in it to their hearts' content without incurring a serious hardship upon their pocketbooks. The cherry crop in Wisconsin and Illinois promises to be good and already some of the early varieties are ripening. Cherries are expected to be free from worms and this fact alone will make the crop a record breaker. The trees are loaded down with the ripening fruit and if the weather proves favorable an abundance of cherries will be in condition for the market in a few weeks.

Vegetable Supply Good. In the vegetable line Bower City people have been equally fortunate, for home growers have constantly kept a fresh supply before consumers. New potatoes are being looked for from the home growers, but merchants say that it will be July 1 before any appreciable quantity can be depended upon. The early part of the season has not been the most favorable for the hurrying of tubers to early maturity. The delay may lose the growers the benefit of some of the first delivery prices, for indications are that when the home grown crop is ready to harvest the prices will be over. There seems to be a large supply of old potatoes on hand. Heavy shipments of new tubers are being received from outside the state.

Peas Are Plentiful. Among the new offerings which are being enjoyed is the tender, luscious green peas. Pods are of good size, the filling is soft and the peas are hard. Home growers are getting busy picking peas and good deliveries are being made. Fifty cents a peck is the average price that is asked for the vegetable. Green wax beans have suddenly developed a scarcity and but few can be secured. They were plentiful a few days ago but they seem to have disappeared.

RETURNED HIS OLD ARMY CUP

GRAND ARMY COMRADES HAD SURPRISE FOR MR. NORCROSS

AT THE STATE CONVENTION

Had Not Seen the Souvenir for Forty Four Years—Some Statistics of the Veterans of Wisconsin.

Along with the beautiful jeweled badge which has been admired by his many friends in this city, the comrades gathered at La Crosse last week presented Pliny Norcross, the retiring department commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, with another token which will be quite as dearly prized by him and his family in coming years. It was none other than the old tin-cup he carried as a soldier in the Civil War and which he had not seen for forty-four years. Some sort of romance, tradition or story hovers about every bit of accoutrement brought back from that great conflict. The drinking-tin had its adventures, was given away as a souvenir by the owner, and was lost to and almost forgotten by him for nearly half a century.

Presented to Friends. When the 1st Wisconsin regiment was made up at Madison in the spring of 1861 it was a part of the equipment furnished Mr. Norcross in common with the other soldiers. The late I. A. Lapham of Milwaukee, formerly state geologist, had been very kind to the Janesville man as a student in the university and before the regiment departed for the front the latter was several times invited to visit at the scientist's home. Mr. Lapham had two daughters and when at the expiration of his term of service, Corporal Norcross of Company "K" returned to Wisconsin, he presented them with the army cup. On the bottom he scratched with a jack-knife the following inscription:

COMPLIMENTS OF PLINY NORCROSS. CO. K, 1st WISCONSIN, THREE MONTHS, INFANTRY. TO THE MISSES LAPHAM. AUGUST 18, 1861.

A Surprise at La Crosse

At one of the big meetings in La Crosse this week Dr. Hugo Philler of Waukesha, medical director of the encampment, came out upon the platform and asked the attention of the comrades for a few minutes. He said that the department commander of the state, General Norcross, had done good service during the year and that in recognition of the same he desired to present a loving-cup from the ladies of Milwaukee. So saying, he began to unwrap a parcel done up in tissue paper which he had been holding in his left hand, and amid a great shout and uproar the old tin army cup was revealed. The recipient of the gift was so surprised and overcame that he could scarcely find words to express his appreciation.

Beautiful Memento

The beautiful gold Grand Army badge, presented the Janesville man by W. H. Grinnell of Beloit, senior aid-de-camp and chief of staff, in behalf of the staff officers, is set in diamonds and rubies. Depending from the gold eagle and cannon is the shoulder strap in black enamel displaying two silver stars with their sparkling centres which denote the rank of major-general. Below this is the beautiful gold medallion with three of the red-stones set in each of the star points. The whole has the customary background of red, white, and blue silk. It is a fine specimen of the jeweler's art and a memento of which Gen. Norcross has good reason to be proud.

Something About Grand Army

The man elected to the office of department commander serves one year. In the state of Wisconsin there were 3,440 comrades in good standing January 1, 1905. They were divided among 241 Posts. The loss by death during the past year was 331 and for the year preceding, 301. The ratio of death among the Civil War veterans in this state is therefore only about 3 1/2 per cent—a ratio as good as that shown by some of the schedules of the insurance companies.

Successful Convention

The convention at La Crosse was one of the most enjoyable and largely attended that has been held. Gen. Wilmon W. Blackmar, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the United States, was one of the distinguished persons present.

Margaret Jamieson

The remains of Margaret Jamieson, the three-year-old daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Jamieson of Chicago, were brought here this morning on the quarter of twelve train on the North-Western road and taken directly to Mount Zion cemetery for services and burial. Rev. Hacy conducted the ceremonies. The child died at the home of her uncle and aunt Mr. and Mrs. Ansel Dickenson, in Chicago, where she has lived since the death of her parents.

Mrs. I. M. Holsapple is visiting in Milwaukee.

LIVES DEARER THAN OUR VERY OWN

How many lives dearer to us than our very own have been placed in needless jeopardy by failure to provide against and forestall the great suffering which too frequently accompanies and follows the bearing of children? That we would do anything within our power to obviate the possibility of such an happening is too patent to admit of question; therefore mark well this fact—a liniment, by name, has been devised, whose function it is to prepare in advance the muscles and tissues intimately associated with parturition.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

This liniment is for external application. By its use the parts are relaxed and enabled to withstand not only the actual strain brought to bear on them during accouchement, but also to rally from this ordeal and speedily regain their normal proportions and tonicity. It is not irritating to the most sensitive surfaces, and is applicable to all cases. It is not enough to call it Mother's Friend—it is the friend of the whole family. $1.00, all druggists. Book "Motherhood" free.

WRITTEN IN RED

CHAS. HOWARD MONTAGUE AND C. W. DYAR

(Copyright, by The Cassell Publishing Co.)

"Mr. Lamm," he said at last, "the Moissot episode in my experience is one I am not fond of calling to mind. I met the girl when she was about 16 years old—where it matters not—I thought I was fond of her—and was caught in the snares of her pretty face. My acquaintance with her did not last long. The vindictive temper and insane jealousy of the girl, who was more of a woman than most of our northern females of twice her age, warned me that I had made a mistake."

"The parting was not voluntary on her part?"

Stackhouse ground his teeth; his lips were dry and feverish; under the table his fists, the detective noticed, were clenched.

"Certainly not," said Stackhouse. "That would have been impossible."

"Ah!" said the detective. "Unfortunately."

"Unfortunately!" echoed Stackhouse. "Good heavens, man, it was madness—insanity!"

"And—poor policy," added the detective, significantly. "But bygones are irretrievable. And so it is this woman whom you suspect to have poisoned your wife's mind against you?"

"Well, sir, have you told me all that is necessary for me to know?"

"There is nothing else of the past that concerns you and me, Mr. Lamm," said Stackhouse, nervously, wiping the perspiration from his brow. "Except this. Eight years ago I accidentally heard that Marie Moissot was living in New York under another name. A few years later an adventure blazed into notoriety in the great metropolis under the name of Mme. Perle, who tallied well with the description of this Marie. That she was the same person I am unable definitely to determine. I have only seen her photograph. I did not investigate nearer."

Detective Lamm was becoming hugely interested.

"So, so," he exclaimed. "Well, and what have you done?"

"Done!" echoed Stackhouse, giving him a startled look.

"Yes, I mean recently, since the trouble with your wife—with reference to obtaining information concerning this woman."

"I'll be entirely frank with you," said Stackhouse. "I hesitated about making anybody a confidant in this purely personal matter. I therefore inserted an advertisement in Monday morning's papers, offering to pay for information of this woman. That advertisement was answered, and it brought me to a house in Shawmut avenue, where I have excellent reasons for believing that this woman has been; which shows conclusively that my surmises in regard to her having poisoned my wife's mind in person were correct. But my efforts to see this Marie have been baffled by the intervention of a cunning demon in petticoats whom she deputed to meet me. I have written to her, but receiving no reply am obliged to place the matter in your hands. Mr. Lamm, do you think you can help me?"

Nothing could conceal the intense anxiety, the almost hungry look of supplication in the junior partner's face.

"Ah!" said the detective to himself, "whatever this man's past may have been, one thing of his present life is eminently plain. He loves his wife."

"And you, then, don't suspect," he said, aloud, "this woman of complicity in the murder of your partner?"

"I suspect her of nothing that is good and everything that is bad," said Stackhouse, bitterly. "I know that this woman hates me with one of those hatreds that will never forget nor forgive. Wherever I am so long as she lives I am in danger. She is revenge."

"I suspect her of nothing that is good and everything that is bad," said Stackhouse, bitterly. "I know that this woman hates me with one of those hatreds that will never forget nor forgive. Wherever I am so long as she lives I am in danger. She is revenge."

ful, and, more than all, accomplished and unscrupulous."

"Accomplished?" repeated Lamm, quickly. "Do you use that word intentionally, Mr. Stackhouse?"

"I certainly do," replied Thornton Stackhouse. "She has all the native ability of a naturally shrewd and cunning woman, who has lost less by the neglect of her education in letters than she has gained through her direct contact with the world."

"Well, then," said Lamm, drawing a full breath, "I cannot work in the dark. I must have the fullest possible description of Marie Moissot at the very latest hour known to you."

"Of course," said Stackhouse, quickly. "I knew that and came prepared. I have brought you the photograph I spoke of. It was obtained for me seven years ago by a friend of mine—the photograph of Mme. Perle! All I can say of it is that if Mme. Perle be not Marie Moissot, the resemblance between the two women is strange and striking indeed."

John Lamm had some difficulty to conceal his delight as Thornton Stackhouse placed upon the table before his eyes the counterfeit presentation of the object of Thornton Stackhouse's fears.

There was no question about it. Mme. Perle was Mme. Raymond!

When Thornton Stackhouse released from John Lamm's den the efficient custodian who kept him constantly under surveillance had already notified Inspector Applebee of his whereabouts. Mr. Stackhouse was therefore surprised to find a hand laid lightly upon his shoulder.

"One thing," said the voice of the Inspector in his ear, "just one thing, Mr. Stackhouse. I won't detain you a moment. Do you know, or have you ever known, a person calling himself Albert Runyon?"

Stackhouse staggered and steadied himself against the building for support. He fairly gasped for breath.

"What's the matter?" said the Inspector, with quick suspicion.

"It is my heart," said Stackhouse, hurriedly. "A sudden start you gave me. I have trouble that way. The life insurance physicians have warned me."

"Excuse me," apologized the Inspector. "I didn't mean to startle you. The object of my inquiry you will find by reading this letter, which seems to have been sent anonymously to your partner about six weeks ago."

Stackhouse took the letter and read it, and at the end his agitation had almost vanished. He gave it back coolly to the officer.

"I am sorry I cannot help you," he said; "the man is an utter stranger to me."

CHAPTER XIX.

THE HEAD OF THE SERPENT.

Without denying that the press, in these days of sharp news competition, occasionally clogs the wheels of justice in the effort to supply the public with the latest news in great criminal affairs (in little ones, where the interest is not great, there is little fault to be found), it must none the less be said that in most cases the extreme publicity given to the details becomes in itself a mighty engine of detection.

Possessed of all the facts, the entire public is resolved into a detective force. The salient points of the case, which in other countries are kept profoundly secret among a few men, are in everybody's mouth. The people are made familiar with the appearance, the histories, the peculiar facts in the lives of the victim, and of those suspected of complicity in the crime. The result is that a few hours after the publication of the important details of a mysterious crime people begin to flock to the offices of the great newspapers, eager to contribute the mite of information which they possess. As time goes on, and the facts gain a wider and wider circulation, even that ever-lessening circle which poverty, ignorance or stupidity isolates from the fountain-head of general information, the newspaper, is reached, and if there is any suspicious fact known to any disinterested person in the community it is more than likely to be brought to light through the same peculiar channel.

The North case was certainly not an anomaly in this respect. North & Stackhouse were too well known through their dealings with the public not to have left all sorts of "clues" and suspicious circumstances in the past, which were sure to come out as soon as the dreadful crime set everybody talking about them. To Thomas were referred daily several people who came to the Globe office for the purpose of affording, through that journal, some assistance in carrying on the important investigation, which, though as yet so little successful, had set everybody agog with wonder. From these people the reporter learned that North and Stackhouse had many enemies, more or less bitter and personal, rising from their questionable business transactions; but there was nothing which impressed him as sufficiently promising to be important until the morning of Saturday, June 25, a gentleman called who related a little circumstance which seemed to him pregnant with possible significance. It certainly lacked no element of romantic and mysterious interest.

It was an episode in a Boston broker's office in which a very pretty woman figured. The man could not recall all the details, but he recollected that this woman had preceded him in the occupancy of an inner office, and that while he was waiting for her to come out he heard scraps of a very animated conversation of which North & Stackhouse were the subject. In the partition between the outer and inner office were a series of large windows, which were generally in various degrees of openness. As he stood with his back against the partition, the narrator could not well avoid hearing the conversation between the broker and his fair client, and after the glimpse he had caught of the latter his curiosity was considerably aroused. The broker seemed to have been defending the reputation of North & Stackhouse, on the ground that it was necessary to expect just such phenomena in the stock market, but the woman, who seemed to have been a heavy loss in the Nicaragua Midland, was unsparing in her denunciations of the firm, which she delivered in not especially choice English with a slight foreign accent, but in the bitterest and most vindictive tone imaginable.

"Hush!" said the broker, suddenly; "there is Mr. Stackhouse now." And sure enough, the junior partner of the aforesaid firm was crossing the office at that minute. Immediately there was a suppressed scream, followed by a rustle of silk, and the door between the inner and outer offices closed with a violence that caused the listener to rebound from the partition. The clerks looked up from their writing. Stackhouse himself appeared slightly startled, but he seemed to be in a hurry and transacted his business and hastened out in a short space of time. Meanwhile in the inner office the broker was addressing his client in tones of solicitous alarm. What was the matter?

"And do you mean to tell me that that man was this Mr. Stackhouse, of North & Stackhouse?" the woman said, hurriedly.

"To be sure he is," answered the broker.

"And it is to that man that I was intrusting my money?"

There was such a dangerous inflection in the woman's voice that the broker was apparently surprised into silence, and immediately she broke out in the most violent imprecations and epithets which the listener had ever heard pass a woman's lips.

"Why," said the narrator to the reporter, "I felt as if I were standing outside a cage watching a mad tigress expending her strength on the iron bars. I didn't know what she could have against Thornton Stackhouse, but I thought I would rather be in any position than in that man's shoes with such a woman in his wake. But as it was none of my business, I ceased to trouble myself about it."

This was the extent of the informant's observation. He was buttonholed by a business acquaintance at that minute, and heard and saw no more except that the woman shortly afterward went out, and that her passion had left her very pale for one of her complexion. That this episode might be of value had not occurred to him till he had read an article in that morning's Globe suggesting a conspiracy against Stackhouse; but he desired to give the information in strict confidence, as he did not care to be placed in the light of an eavesdropper before his business associates. Mr. Thomas assured him that he might rest easy on that score, and hastened to follow up the new clue.

that while he was waiting for her to come out he heard scraps of a very animated conversation of which North & Stackhouse were the subject. In the partition between the outer and inner office were a series of large windows, which were generally in various degrees of openness. As he stood with his back against the partition, the narrator could not well avoid hearing the conversation between the broker and his fair client, and after the glimpse he had caught of the latter his curiosity was considerably aroused. The broker seemed to have been defending the reputation of North & Stackhouse, on the ground that it was necessary to expect just such phenomena in the stock market, but the woman, who seemed to have been a heavy loss in the Nicaragua Midland, was unsparing in her denunciations of the firm, which she delivered in not especially choice English with a slight foreign accent, but in the bitterest and most vindictive tone imaginable.

"Hush!" said the broker, suddenly; "there is Mr. Stackhouse now." And sure enough, the junior partner of the aforesaid firm was crossing the office at that minute. Immediately there was a suppressed scream, followed by a rustle of silk, and the door between the inner and outer offices closed with a violence that caused the listener to rebound from the partition. The clerks looked up from their writing. Stackhouse himself appeared slightly startled, but he seemed to be in a hurry and transacted his business and hastened out in a short space of time. Meanwhile in the inner office the broker was addressing his client in tones of solicitous alarm. What was the matter?

"And do you mean to tell me that that man was this Mr. Stackhouse, of North & Stackhouse?" the woman said, hurriedly.

"To be sure he is," answered the broker.

"And it is to that man that I was intrusting my money?"

There was such a dangerous inflection in the woman's voice that the broker was apparently surprised into silence, and immediately she broke out in the most violent imprecations and epithets which the listener had ever heard pass a woman's lips.

TRADE DEMAND GROWS LARGER

Teamsters' Strike Continues to Hamper Business at Chicago.

FINE WEATHER IS GREAT HELP

Retail Merchants Are Kept Busy by Requests for Seasonable Wearing
Apparel—Liberal Orders for Iron Factors.

Chicago, June 17.—The weekly review of trade conditions in Chicago published by R. G. Dun & Co. says: "While labor troubles dragged along, some recovery was made in making deliveries and business generally reached a very high volume. Seasonable weather helped materially in the distribution of commodities, the retail lines being stimulated to largely increased activity, and there was well-sustained demand in wholesale merchandise and in metal and wood products.

"Orders for future delivery gained in dry goods, footwear, clothing, heavy machinery and iron and steel, indicating that confidence in the outlook had not abated. Railroad traffic throughout the week is of unparalleled proportions in both freight and travel and earnings exhibit much advance over those of a year ago.

Harvesting Extends.
"Agricultural conditions made further satisfactory progress. Harvesting has extended and this prompted heavier marketing of old crops, receipts here being more than expected, but, on the other hand, shipments from this port almost doubled those of last week and are 60 per cent over those of corresponding week last year.

"Interior advices reflect widening demand for necessities and country stores have good sales. Mercantile collections are prompt, the banks are fairly well loaned up and money is in steady request for commercial needs.

Iron and Lumber.
"Manufacturing gained additional strength from liberal commitments for rails, pig iron, rolling stock and farm implements. Receipts of iron ore are unusually large and the furnaces run without interruption, notwithstanding rumors of lower prices and curtailment of output.

"Lumber of all kinds remains in good request for both building and factory consumption and smaller receipts by lake make prices firmer. Building operations involve exceptional outlays for material and labor and new plans for business structures represent considerable investment of capital.

"Receipts of hides, 3,969,995 pounds, compared with 3,483,562 pounds a year ago.

Grain Market Active.
"Primary foodstuffs continue in improved demand and board of trade operations have reached enlarged volume in both cash grain and provisions. Receipts of grain, 4,313,367 bushels, compared with 4,811,546 bushels a year ago, and the shipments were 4,675,124 bushels, against 2,939,487 bushels. Stocks of wheat were decreased, but the milling needs are light owing to poor export trade in flour. Hog-packing was larger than a year ago and there is ample available product for current requirements. Live stock receipts were 287,593 head, against 275,595 head a year ago.

RAILROADS FIGHT MAXIMUM RATES

Contention Is Made That Commission's Tariff Schedule Would Mean
Confiscation of Property.

Kansas City, Mo., June 17.—Judge Smith McPherson of Red Oak, Iowa, in the United States district court here, issued a temporary injunction restraining the railway and warehouse commissioners of Missouri and the attorney general of the state from enforcing the maximum freight rate law, which went into effect June 16, and against three Kansas City shippers, preventing the latter from claiming penalties under the law. The injunction was granted at the request of eighteen railways doing business in Missouri.

The roads brought suit against the state officials on the ground that the rates provided in the new law are prohibitive and would amount to the confiscation of their property. The suit against the three shippers is intended to cover the shippers of the state as a class.

The order of the court is made returnable June 28, when the railroads will seek to have it made permanent. At that time District Judge J. F. Phillips will hear the case with Judge McPherson.

The Wisconsin river rose four inches at Prairie du Chien Friday, and the Mississippi is at a standstill. Traffic has been resumed on the Milwaukee road on the four miles of track which had been washed out and weakened.

Kemble's Retort to Band Leader.
Once when Kemble was rehearsing the romance sung by Richard in the play "Richard Coeur de Lion," Shaw, the leader of the band, called out from the orchestra: "Mr. Kemble, my dear Mr. Kemble, you are murdering time." Kemble, calmly taking a pinch of snuff, said: "My dear sir, it is better for you to murder time at once than be constantly beating him as you do."

PENILESS WIFE ACCUSES MAGNATE

Niece of Henry Cassaway Davis Says
Her Husband Left Her for Girl
Typewriter in His Office.

New York, June 17.—James Street, organizer of the recently formed Street Steamship company of this city, backed by the powerful Morgan interest, is in the Polyclinic hospital slowly convalescing after an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Street has been forced to resign the presidency of the steamship company. In addition he is charged with abandoning his wife and six children and with wrecking a business career that held promise of immense success, all through infatuation for a 17-year-old girl, a typewriter in the employ of the steamship company.

The deserted wife, who alleges she has been left penniless, is the niece of Henry Cassaway Davis, the Democratic candidate for vice-president in the last campaign. She married Street nineteen years ago.

Several days ago Mrs. Street was compelled to vacate her handsome home at Highwood, an aristocratic suburb of Englewood, N. J., and seek shelter with a sister. Her last dollar had been expended.

The girl is Edna Miller, daughter of the late Dr. William Turnbull Miller, who practiced at Palisade Park, N. J. One of the astonishing features of the case is that Mrs. Miller, the girl's mother, is now living with her daughter in Mr. Street's luxurious apartments in Gresham court at One Hundred and Fortieth street and Lenox avenue.

It is understood that Mr. Street's salary as president of the new steamship company was $7,000 a year and that a further arrangement as to commissions on business assured him at the outset an annual income of $20,000.

A Boy's Baptizing Formula.

The young son of a prominent Massachusetts politician once attended a country baptism while on his summer vacation. After returning home from the church he was questioned about the service, and stated that the best part was where the boy was put into the water and the minister said: "I baptize you in the name of the Father, the Son, and into the hole he goes."

Big Egg for Editor.

Knapp, 730 Jefferson street, Waverly, sent to the Sun office an egg weighing exactly a quarter of a pound, which was laid on the preceding day by an English black-breasted red game hen owned by him. The egg is 6 1/4 inches in circumference and 7 1/2 inches around point and butt. —Baltimore Sun.

A Janesville Woman

called our office by phone a few days ago and asked us to deliver a quart of cream. The cream which she had been using was from milk which had not been aerated and pasteurized and would not stay sweet over night. She is now convinced that a goodly sum can be saved each year from the losses of milk and cream which the Pasteurizing Process saves.
